as we see it

■ Apparently the world is not yet ready for all-out communication. All those impressive speeches, and their rosy descriptions of the brotherhood of man that will evolve from our ability to see and hear one another, mean absolutely nothing when it comes to practical matters—such as who will be permitted to use the Early Bird satellite, when, for what purpose.

COMSAT, the public corporation established by Congress to own and operate communications satellites, has a tremendously difficult and sensitive job, especially when, as NBC President Robert E. Kintner recently said, “any one of a dozen countries can exert what amounts to a veto on satellite news broadcasts.”

■ France already has done just that. In 1963, CBS's Town Meeting of the World set up a broadcast during which world leaders, speaking from distant cities, could exchange views on international matters. Jean Monnet, father of the European Common Market, was to speak from Paris. Monnet's views are not always De Gaulle's views, so France denied CBS the use of its ground station at Pleumeur-Bodou, then the only one on the Continent. Without that station, Monnet had to speak from Brussels, and the program was not seen live in Europe.

More recently, COMSAT itself vetoed a program, the dedication of an acre of Runnymede in England to the memory of President Kennedy. CBS wanted to telecast it live via Early Bird. COMSAT said it wasn't possible unless all three American networks requested the service.

■ It is COMSAT's responsibility to see to it that the whims of petty dictators in communications be confined to their own countries. It is COMSAT's responsibility to avoid petty rules (and ridiculously high rates) that could turn a hope for all mankind into a mere gadget in the sky.

HAVING A WONDERFUL TIME

—except, of course, for that typhoon and a few other mishaps

By Sheldon Leonard

(A letter from producer Leonard to TV GUIDE about his experiences in Hong Kong filming 'I Spy,' an international-intrigue series to be seen on NBC next season)

I have in hand your letter requesting an article for TV GUME about my experiences while shooting the early episodes of I Spy in Hong Kong, and I agree with your suggestion that it would enhance the interest therein if I could find an element of conflict around which to build the piece.

Unfortunately, I have been too busy to think out a conflict angle because I have been fighting the weather, the language barrier, the technical problems of shooting in the middle of the city's teeming millions, the incredible curiosity of the Chinese people, and so on—and so on—and so on.

As you know, I Spy has been a long time in preparation. Three years, in fact. By the time Mort Fine and Dave Friedkin and I had tied up Bob Culp and Bill Cosby as our leads, we were ready to put into operation a completely new technique for making color films under adverse conditions—new microphones, more portable equipment and faster films.

The first year of our series will use locations in Hong Kong, Japan, Mexico and Washington, D.C., and I was complacently confident when I set out to direct the first group of locations in Hong Kong, but my confidence dropped a notch on the first day of shooting here. We caught ourselves a typhoon—in the time of year when they never get typhoons, and spent two precious days of our schedule staring at the wind-driven rain slanting past our hotel windows in 120-mile-an-hour gusts. Even when the typhoon was over, the weather never really cleared up. In four weeks we got only one day of sunshine.

The language barrier led to particular frustration because of an engaging characteristic of the Chinese people. They are very anxious to please. So when given instructions, they nod even though they don't understand a word. This gives a director false confidence. You feel that you have anticipated every contingency. You have briefed everyone thoroughly. They know what they are to do and how to do it. You yell "Action!" and then the driver of the continued car rams the brand-new sedan into the lamppost instead of stopping at the curb. The Chinese actors jump out and run away from the camera instead of toward it. The doorman opens the wrong door. And after they've peeled you off the walls, you call them all together and start over again. You say to your interpreter, "Tell them to try it again," and he takes off. In the translation your six-word sentence becomes a tirade. I never knew why it took five minutes to translate and transmit a brief declarative sentence. Bob Culp's theory was that when I said, "Tell them to try it again," the interpreter rendered it in this fashion—"Now I want you to understand that this is not my idea. He is the director and we should try to keep him happy. Personally, if it were up to me, you could do things any way you liked, but he has his own notions and we mustn't argue with him. I am embarrassed by what he wants me to tell you but . . ."

The curiosity of the Chinese is beyond description. The sight of a motion-picture camera affects them like the scent of blood in the water is said to affect sharks. From all quarters they come homing in on you as soon as you unload your equipment—getting underfoot, waving at the camera, stepping in front of the lens. What I am about to tell you is going to sound like gross exaggeration, but you've known me long enough to take my word for it when I assure you that it is the literal truth. Last night at 3:30 in the morning, in a remote back alley, in a driving rain, over 300 people of all ages stood without shelter to watch our unattended equipment while we sipped tea in a nearby restaurant waiting for a break in the weather.

The difficulties I have with them are, of course, far more my fault than theirs. I'm slow in learning how they do things. For instance, in the States if I say to a prop man, "Please pick up that chair and take it over to that corner," I can look forward to the result without apprehension. If I say the same thing to one of our Chinese workers, I'm in trouble. If I pass by an hour later, he will have picked up the chair, he will have taken it to the corner, but he will still be holding it in mid-air because I did not say, ". . . and put it down."

We've taxed our combined wits to find ways to shoot in the middle of this teeming city without attracting the attention of the people. Sometimes our devices work and other times . . .

Like when I put our camera crew across the street from the restaurant entrance we were shooting. We were well out of sight—on the roof of a public toilet. Several blocks away from the scene—to avoid alerting the neighborhood people—I rehearsed the actors who were to do the drive up. To guarantee a smooth arrival on the designated mark, I hired a Hollywood stunt driver who happened to be in Hong Kong. We checked our procedures. We rolled the cameras. Over a walkie-talkie I gave the order to start. Everything had been anticipated—except that the driver was unaccustomed to the prevailing right-hand drive. So he didn't leave enough clearance on the left of his car when he pulled up at the curb. So he knocked down the bamboo bracing of the big neon sign they were installing in front of the restaurant. So it fell down. So everybody in Hong Kong quit whatever they were doing to stand around and look.

I won't go into the problems that Hong Kong's unique status as a bargain center creates except to say that it is indescribably frustrating to find half your crew late getting back from the lunch break because they're having fittings.

When I get back, remind me to tell you about the time I found out two stunt men couldn't swim—but not until after they had followed my instructions and jumped into Hong Kong harbor when I called "Action!" And about the time I lined up a scene, heavy with low-key dialog, under the looming bow of the President Wilson, which was tied to the Kowloon public pier. When we were lit and ready to roll, it was 15 minutes to sailing time, which was plenty for a two-minute scene, except that just as I started, some local celebrators set off a 100-foot string of firecrackers, which takes 17 minutes to burn, to speed the departing ship. Do you know anyone who can use a lovely shot of the President Wilson backing away from the pier with me tearing my hair out in the foreground?

And don't forget to ask me the name of the vacationing TV celebrity who spent some time here while we were shooting—and who had a bruising encounter with the Far East. One morning after, because he couldn't remember whether he'd gotten out of line with his debutante date of the night before, and just to play safe, he gave his driver 50 Hong Kong dollars and told him to go to the flower shop in the young lady's hotel and buy flowers and give them to her with his compliments. The driver came back shortly thereafter to report "mission accomplished." Yet, later in the day, the young lady in question snubbed our swain as though he were a typhoid carrier. He asked the driver if he had given her the flowers. Well, not exactly, but just as good. Like how? Well, when the driver got to the hotel, she was on her way out with some friends. So he didn't ' e time to buy flowers. Instead he went up to her, gave her the money and told her his boss wanted her to have it for last night.

Admittedly, that wasn't my problem, but it shows you another aspect of what I've had to cope with. But it's been worth it.

As you know, I Spy is about a globe-trotting tennis bum; his buddy, who is also his trainer, and their adventures as undercover agents of our government. We knew it wouldn't be a piece of cake, but we didn't know how greatly it would tax our skills. Aggravating thing about it is that now that we've learned a little about how to cope with Hong Kong, we've got to pigeonhole that knowledge and start to anticipate Japan.

So now you know why I haven't been able to concentrate on a conflict angle for TV GUME. But don't be impatient. As soon as things cool off a little, I'll work on it. I've got an idea in mind—something about the fights I've had with a tailor, trying to get him to shorten the pants.

*'THAT DRIP,' HE SAID.
'-----,' SHE SAID.*

Or, how romance bloomed on the set of 'No Time for Sergeants'

When Sammy Jackson, who plays Will Stockdale in No Time for Sergeants, first met Laurie Sibbald, the willowy brunette who had been signed for the role of his sweetheart, Milly Anderson, the two young stars took a strong and immediate dislike to one another. Sammy, an ambitious and dedicated actor, thought Laurie did not take her job seriously enough. Laurie, who regarded working in a TV series as a lark, thought Sammy was a wet blanket. Anybody who couldn't predict the outcome of a situation like that just doesn't know his Hollywood; and, sure enough, it happened—dislike turned to love, and now, although Will and Milly have exchanged only one on-screen kiss, Sammy and Laurie are talking about marriage.

The story of a period of scrapping as a prelude to the dawn of young love sounds like something that might have been cooked up on the same Warner Brothers lot 20 or 30 years ago as the opener to a backstage musical. But the animosity between them was very real, and grew out of profound differences of background and attitude. Sammy, at 27, the boy from North Carolina, had struggled hard for his break, felt that his whole life depended on the success of No Time for Sergeants, and behaved accordingly.

Laurie, on the other hand, was 19, a local girl ("I was born in the Glendale Sanitarium, but don't get me wrong") and most of her recent years had been spent in breezing from one lucky break to the next. As a dancer, she had turned down scholarship offers from the Russian Bolshoi Ballet and George Balanchine's New York City Ballet, two of the world's foremost troupes. As a model she had worked for a top fashion house, had several commercial jobs and was featured in magazines. When she turned to acting she had only a few minor parts before she landed the Milly Anderson role in Sergeants. She took that job, she says, "for the money and glamor," and "my attitude was very negative."

Relations between Sammy and Laurie quickly settled into a chilly all-business rigidity. They would bill and coo for the cameras and then retire to neutral corners between takes. They would bill and coo for publicity pictures and walk away from one another without a word. Sammy once referred to Laurie as "that drip." What Laurie said about Sammy is not on record.

But, as any biologist will tell you, billing and cooing is a tricky business. The studio had Sammy escort Laurie to a couple of more or less official functions like the Hollywood Deb Star Ball, and things relaxed to the point where Sammy and Laurie were talking to one another on the set. With that much of an opening, love found its way in no time.

According to Laurie, there was a specific day when, between takes, they were making use of the idle time—Sammy's influence is already apparent here—to improvise some scenes and work on their reactions. Sammy threw Laurie an invitation to accompany him down to the feed store and watch them unload fertilizer. Laurie's reaction to that—an I'd-love-to smile contradicting itself with a nose already curled in anticipation—was professional enough to draw a laugh from a few watching crew hands. "I was so pleased to get a laugh," she says, "that I just threw myself into Sammy's arms. And when I did that, something went click."

Something went so resoundingly click that Laurie and Sammy are now "engaged to be engaged." Formal engagement and wedding plans, however, are contingent on what happens to Sammy's career now that No Time for Sergeants has been canceled. Meanwhile, Laurie and Sammy continue to walk around holding hands, and billing and cooing.

They still come in WITH SPIKES HIGH

As commentators, Leo Durocher and Jackie Robinson aren't afraid of raising the dust

BY MELVIN DURLAG

In the Italian Renaissance estate he inhabits in Beverly Hills, Leo Durocher sleeps in a bed whose headboard, hand-carved from chestnut, once served as a fireplace in the Vanderbilt mansion in New York. Other costly antiques and art objects decorate the rooms. The walls are festooned with fine paintings, and Leo cleanses himself in a sunken bath of imported marble, surrounded by wall-to-wall carpeting.

Some 3000 miles away, in Stamford, Conn., Jackie Robinson occupies a handsome fieldstone two-story, furnished in a manner reflecting the refined tastes of its owner. The 11-room home reposes in the area's most fashionable section.

It is understandable that ABC would pick men from such genteel surroundings to preach the efficacy of hustle and hungriness each Saturday on the baseball telecasts. Primarily, it is the job of Leo and Jackie to tell the Nation's viewers what the players are doing wrong. They also say what the boys are doing right, but for this, it is safe to assume, the network didn't hire them.

In the lexicon of the trade, Robinson and Durocher are "color" commentators, appropriate titles considering their genius for making people see red. Each works with a play-by-play announcer in the games televised weekly as part of the major leagues' new package arrangement with ABC.

There are, of course, more experienced men in the field than Leo and Jackie, but the network is taking the position that what baseball needs is stimulation—bulls, so to speak, busting up the china shop of tradition, which all too often has found announcers reluctant to rock the vessel.

To a large extent, baseball has been responsible for this trend. Controlling the broadcasts at the local level, the clubs select their own announcers and make it clear to them that charity begins at home. Not surprisingly, a garden of house men has bloomed, painting skies blue even on days they are black.

In Robinson and Durocher, ABC is getting gentlemen distinguished in the field of criticism. As knockers, in fact, they can win at any distance, wire-to-wire or by coming from off the pace.

For all their crises, on and off the field, both have unmistakable charm, no doubt accounting for the fact that they have prospered over the years despite an army of enemies. In a reflective moment, Leo once observed, "A chiropodist could get rich treating all the toes I have stepped on."

Nor is Jackie delicate with his words. He makes his credo clear: "I don't tell people what they want to hear. I tell them what they ought to hear." A feature of Robinson and Durocher opinions is that they are always positive, if not always correct.

Firm in defense of his rights in sports, Jackie took a position equally militant upon leaving athletics. He became a spokesman for the Negro in the battle for civil rights and he has invaded politics, not as an office-seeker, but as a king-maker. Of course, some of his kings, such as Richard Nixon, Nelson Rockefeller and Kenneth Keating, have failed to be crowned, but he also has hit winners, including Lyndon B. Johnson in the last election.

Now 58, Durocher, who is 12 years older than Robinson, never has concerned himself with society's heavy-weight problems, concentrating more on custom-made haberdashery, fine restaurants and opening nights. A trim ankle has been known to capture his fancy, too.

A turbulent career in baseball ended for Leo in 1955, when he resigned as manager of the New York Giants to take an executive position with NBC. He left and returned to baseball in 1961 as coach of the Dodgers, only to resign last fall when he appeared to have the job locked up as manager of the Cardinals. The only trouble was that Gussie Busch, the St. Louis owner, changed his mind at the last moment and gave the position to Red Schoendienst.

It is the view of Durocher, who once did a stretch as baseball color commentator for NBC, that the function of this type of analyst is to anticipate what's going to happen, rather than second-guess. "I believe in going on record before the manager makes his decision," says Leo. "I might say, for instance, 'If I were running that team, I would bunt in this situation.'"

"And supposing the manager calls a hit-and-run," we interjected.

"In that case, I wouldn't criticize him. I'd simply say that my way was preferable."

Nor would Leo do a Sunday-morning-quarterback job on a player. In a game he was working in San Francisco this year, Jesus Alou, the Giant right fielder, lost a long fly that let in three runs. Above second-guessing, Leo merely said, "Mays would have had it."

When the isolated camera showed the wind blowing the ball away from Alou, Durocher didn't flinch. "Mays still would have had it," he insisted.

Robinson scolds players more readily than Durocher, holding every major leaguer responsible for the game's image. "If a guy can run the 100 in 11 seconds," says Jackie, "then he should run it in 11 seconds. There is no room in baseball for anything less than a total effort."

One day, he ripped into John Roseboro when the Dodger catcher failed to run out a pop fly drifting foul. "That's a fine example to be setting for young viewers," said Jackie.

Of course, neither Robinson nor Durocher requires a microphone in order to stir the Nation's sports buffs. For instance, in a discussion of the New York Mets last year, Jackie observed that the team would do better with a manager (Casey Stengel) who didn't fall asleep on the bench.

Naturally, such irreverence for the Old Professor brought Metniks to a wartime footing. "Some reporters lashed into me, too," recalls Robinson. "They don't like to hear the truth unless they say it."

Is Jackie sorry he started the rhu-barb? "There's nothing to be sorry for," he says. "A winning ball club must have a winning manager. If the Mets are content to finish last, they have the right man."

ABC is hoping it has, too. The world is ready for Robinson. It's just a matter of whether baseball is.

The Jimmy Dean Show

Jimmy may crack corn, but people do care. And this year he is at least what he is—in contrast to last year when the network brass unwisely tried to make him into something else. For if there's one thing certain in this changing world, it is that you can't make Jimmy Dean into anything but Jimmy Dean.

And that is, really, all to Jimmy's credit. For taken for what he is, and what the show is, Jimmy is good. Take him, for example, talking to his hound-dog-buddy puppet Rowlf (which Jimmy pronounces, for some reason, Ralph). The puppet is manipulated by Jim Henson, who both created him and does his voice—although it's not quite as simple as that because, while Mr. Henson's right hand is the dog's head and his left hand is the dog's left paw, the dog's right hand, on the other hand, is the right hand of a man named Frank Oznowicz. In any case, on one recent show, Mr. Dean tells Rowlf he's got a new protégé, a trained flea named Ringo, of whom, of course, Rowlf is furiously jealous. I hope he jumps on Jimmy and multiplies, he says. "Where," says Jimmy, "do you get those lines?" (Actually much of the show is sprung on him—and he springs right back with some remarkable adlibs.) In any case, Jimmy tells Rowlf that Ringo is next going to juggle 10 Indian clubs. "Tune in next week," says Rowlf, "and see a lady bug wrestle a horse fly." And then, as a finale, Rowlf pours water on Ringo. "Just my luck," he says, "the little punk knows how to swim."

It may not sound funny, but with Rowlf and Jimmy looking at an imaginary trained flea, it was a funny scene. And Jimmy is equally believable, if not as amusing, with other performers. When, for example, after Rex Allen sings "Streets of Laredo," he says, "When anythang's that good, Ah git chill bumps and Ah want you to know, Rex, when you war a-sangin' thar, Ah dang near froze." Of course, with Molly Bee, Jack Jones, Eddy Arnold, Roy Clark and the others, he says pretty near the same thing—but never mind. They deserve it. For country singing or folk singing—and even for city folks who like the country—this show has many virtues. And once in a while you even get a genuine interview. We recall particularly one with Robb Sagendorph, the "Abe Weatherwise" of The Old Farmer's Almanac. "My grandfather," Jimmy told us, "lived by this book, he planted by this book, and he dehorned by it." Well, it bothered us some but again, never mind, we were hooked—even to going along with predicting how much snow there'll be this coming winter by the height the hornets are building their nest.

One last thing though—we wish they'd keep down on those plugs for the performers' records. On an interview show we suppose we've got to stand it, but on a show where the guests get paid, we git hot bumps and Ah want you to know, Jimmy, whan you air a-doin' thet, we dang near burn up.

FOR THE RECORD

Northern California Edition

Playing the Game: One thing television seldom dares to do is scrutinize itself. CBS Reports' "The Rating Game," therefore, seemed as refreshing as a summer breeze when it came along July 12. Unfortunately, it did not dispel much of the fog of mystery and controversy that envelops TV ratings. Critics of the ratings system attacked ("inaccurate, grossly misleading"). Members of the TV Establishment defended ("they are accurate." . . . "we know how to use ratings"). Government representatives frowned ("what concerns me is the use to which ratings are put"). The raters argued their own case ("we don't control anything—we are merely the counters of the ballots"). Narrator Robert Trout raised questions ("can you sample people the way you sample things?") And so it went. In all, some two dozen persons testified, while Trout swam along, putting things in their proper perspective. When "The Rating Game" ended, neither side could claim victory. But the spectators knew at least a little bit more about how television works, and why, than they did an hour earlier. The program was well worth doing—and viewing.

Rating's Ratings: A fascinating and perplexing by-product of "The Rating Game" is the ratings the show itself received. The two leading rating services both provided morning-after returns from New York City, based on electronic contacts with TV sets in

New York homes. Nielsen reported that "The Rating Game" outpointed its network competitors handily: CBS Reports, 20.8; Alfred Hitchcock, 15.8; Ben Casey, 11.3—an outstanding performance for a public-affairs show. ARB, however, had a markedly different count—Hitchcock, 17.1; Casey and Reports, both 11.7. With that criterion it would appear that Nielsen's sample families take more of an interest in their work—and in TV discussions of it—than do ARB's.

Ray Collins: "If they've written it, I've played it," Ray Collins liked to tell interviewers. His career on the stage, in movies and on television spanned some 60 years, the last six of which were spent as Lieutenant Tragg, the dogged detective who was always one step behind TV's Perry Mason. On July 11 Ray Collins died, at the age of 75, in a Santa Monica, Cal., hospital, of emphysema.

Benedict Casey: One of Hollywood's most eligible bachelors hasn't been eligible since June 13. On that day Vincent Edwards took unto himself a wife, in a civil ceremony at his business manager's office. The bride is Kathy Kersh, 22, blonde, a former Miss Rheingold, now a TV actress, who has appeared in Ben Casey. Edwards, true to the old Hollywood tradition which requires that leading men project a bachelor image, kept the wedding a secret until the news leaked. When he got the marriage license he used his real name, Vincenzo Zoino, and, says an associate, adopted a disguise. Must have worn a smile.

AWFUL-AWFULS

For Mr. John Gregory Dunne's information ("The Day the Nazis Landed," July 10), an Awful-Awful is sort of a giant, family-size milkshake. A partial list of its contents reveals loads of ice cream, milk and just the least bit of shake the lady behind the counter can get away with. They are served in the northern New Hampshire area and have apparently now migrated to California.

David Fitzpatrick
Manchester, N. H.

... It is not a nefarious concoction of the Nazis. The drink, for which Bond's Ice Cream Parlor in Upper Montclair, N. J., enjoys a certain local fame, is "awful" big and "awful" good. The child in Dunne's story is in no way indulging in an un-American activity.

Robert E. Morris
Newark, N. J.

... There are, in certain stores, awards given to those hardy souls who consume more than one. Dieters beware!

Carole Condren
Matawan, N. J.

[For the uninitiated, Awful-Awfuls, as concocted by Bond's Ice Cream Parlor, which claims to be the originator of the delicacy: 6 ounces of milk, 2 ounces of flavor and 8 ounces of extra-heavy ice cream made especially by Bond's for the Awful-Awful. As Mr. Fitzpatrick recommends, then—"just the least bit of shake." And if you can down three you get one free. Skol!—Ed.]

RINGSIDE SEATS

Regarding the letter saying that such programs as McHale's Navy and Gomer Pyle tend to ruin the image of our Armed Forces [TV GUIDE, June 19], if this gentleman prefers more bitter entertainment, such as Combat!, I have at least 50,000 ringside seats in the Vietnam arena—no admission charge.

News Director, WFAX
Falls Church, Va.

FROM THE MOUTHS OF BABES

When my 3-year-old daughter began saying Lucille Ball's lines before Lucy did, it occurred to me that old I Love Lucy shows have been re-run into the ground.

Mrs. J. Hall
Flint, Mich.

ALL FOR AL

Every summer, it seems there is a rose among the the thorns. There were summer replacements Andy Williams and Dick Van Dyke, then The Lively Ones, and now to uphold the tradition, there is the Al Hirt show.

6:30 5 10 WORLD WAR I—Documentary

The spring of 1917 is a "season of exhaustion" for the battered Allies, who urgently request U.S. troops to bolster the sagging Western Front. This half hour focuses on the training and early battles of the American Expeditionary Force.

Films and stills show civilians responding to the draft, recruits training at camps across the U.S. and the French people welcoming the first contingents of the A.E.F. in June 1917. It will be almost a year before the A.E.F. sees action as an army.

On May 28, 1918 the American 1st Division, under French orders, takes the German-held town of Cantigny. Nine days later, the American 2nd Division is assigned a "minor objective": Belleau Wood, a two-mile advance that will cost the A.E.F. 8000 casualties. Films also

Also talking about their feelings toward New York and art are banker David Rockefeller and author John Rewald. (60 min.)

9:00 3 4 JONATHAN WINTERS—Comedy

SPECIAL COLOR To wing it, in show-business slang, means to improvise, and winging it is Jonathan’s forte, according to the critics who praised this show when it was first presented last May. Joining in are Steve Allen, baseball’s Leo Durocher, and comics Jerry Stiller and Anne Meara. There’s also a taped tribute by Jack Paar.

During the freewheeling hour, Jonathan portrays 14 characters, including an advice-to-the-lovelorn columnist, a skydiver, the saddest man in the world, the host of a children’s TV show, an airplane passenger, and all five members of the Frickert family on a picnic.

In sketches, rookie pitcher Whip Willis (Jonathan) is interviewed by Durocher; Stiller and Meara portray two people brought together by a wrong number; Steve calls his wife (Jonathan) to say he’ll be home late; and a White House gardener (Steve) phones the President (Jonathan, again).

10:00 9 ROOMFUL OF MUSIC

SPECIAL In the early 1940's Pete Seeger began to open his New York apartment on Sunday afternoons to fellow musicians who wanted to sing or learn each other's songs. In this casual atmosphere, where all listeners participated in the singing, folk music flourished and the informal sessions took on a name—hootenanny.

In this first of two shows taped at the Boston home of Stanley and Hanni Myers, we hear the folk music in its original free and easy fashion.

The performers are Pete Seeger; Joan Baez; the McPeake Family, who play Irish harps and bagpipes; French Canadian fiddle player Jean Carignon; Sonny Terry (harmonica) and Brownie McGhee (guitar); Almeda Riddle; and Bernice Reagon. (60 min.)

Answer to last week's puzzle

PLEADING HIS OWN CASE

After eight years on the air, a weary Raymond Burr tells why he'll continue to shoulder the burden of a weekly television show, as well as a myriad of other responsibilities

BY DWIGHT WHITNEY

As far as Raymond Burr, the millionaire actor-philanthropist, is concerned, Perry Mason has long since ceased to be just a TV show. After eight steady years of playing the part, Mason seems to Burr more like a public trust. And as the self-styled executor of this "trust," Burr is continued an enormously preoccupied and busy man—busy espousing causes, paying hospital bills for insolvent acquaintances, and promulgating on a worldwide basis “the true meaning of the law” as he sees it.

These responsibilities, growing more awesome all the time, Burr tends to wear like gaily colored hair shirts. They include the direct support of 12 people, the indirect support of hundreds, including 13 foster children in five foreign countries. He is a director of the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge, and he is actively involved in the Cerebral Palsy Association, the National Safety Council, the B'nai B'rith and the March of Dimes.

He has arrangements with the Department of Defense and the State Department to take regular trips to entertain American troops abroad—four to Vietnam alone. Since Perry Mason began, he has made 58 speeches before bar associations. He contributes heavily in money and time to CARE, the United Jewish Welfare Fund and the Motion Picture Relief Fund. He has his own private Ford Foundation, called the Raymond Burr Foundation, which collects and dispenses funds “for charitable, educational and literary purposes.”

Finding Ray Burr, the Canadian hardware merchant's son, actor, art connoisseur, gardener, gourmet and cook, amidst all that compulsive humanism isn't easy. Indeed, finding Perry Mason, a really tough man to misplace, is increasingly difficult. It is obvious that both men—actor and alter ego—have now taken a back seat to the new Ray Burr—doer of good deeds and socially responsible human being.

Why does Ray Burr persist in his killing schedule, living the lonely life of a recluse, holing himself up in his office-bedroom just off the Perry Mason set? Why does he get up at 5:30 A.M. to learn those legal speeches? Why does he fight the battle of the calorie to the point where the show closes down while its star takes an enforced rest? It's obvious he doesn't need the money. Is it because Perry Mason is his passport to the council tables of the world?

To find out I met Burr at 6 o'clock of a warm Wednesday night just before his fourth trip to Vietnam. His huge bulk swathed in a green paisley sports shirt, he was making out his will. Behind him stood his lawyer, Donald Leon, a lean, gray man given to laughing at Burr's jokes. To one side hovered Bill Swan, his solicitous man Friday whose job is to sort out the urgent from the merely important. Nearby sat three office girls, somewhat nervous witnesses to the signing.

As Burr initialed the final page, he rose from the chair and declared, “The die is cast. Thank you, ladies.” Then he moved into his inner office where the atmosphere changed perceptibly. Gone was the prim sterility of the outer office. Burr's desk was piled with papers, pictures, old scripts and unopened mail. An outsize plaster cast—which he wore when he tore his shoulder tendons in a helicopter accident in Vietnam—lay on the floor evidently exactly where he last stepped out of it weeks before. Through an open door could be seen his king-size bed, rumpled and unmade.

Burr leaned back in his chair and said: “With me it is difficult to explain why I do certain things. I have been called a fool. But I try to live my life the way I wish other people would live theirs. I try to honor my agreements. And so I find myself doing things I didn't expect I'd be doing. Like another year of Perry Mason.”

“I wanted to do a show called The Power. In it I played the governor of a state, and it had some of the same things going for it that Perry did. It was the best damn thing I ever read, the best new show presentation anybody in this business had ever seen. What happened was that another show conflicted with The Power."

"Slattery's People?"

"I didn't say that!" he replied sharply. "Yes, Slattery's. Anyway the heads of CBS decided that with another year of Perry in the offing they didn't want to convert at that point. I went along. I'm a paid actor. Once having signed a contract, I had a certain obligation. Last year I still felt it. So we made an eighth year of Perry Mason."

It must be added parenthetically that Burr was and is paid what may be the highest straight salary ever offered any TV actor. He is not and never has been a participant in the profits as are most other superstars. Instead his employers, CBS and Paisano Productions, co-owners of the show, pay him astronomical sums, mostly deferred over what amounts to the rest of his natural lifetime.

Burr explained why he had agreed to do yet another season. "My actors were hurting," he said.

Suddenly I saw him as God's gift to intransigent actors, tender to men's troubles, father of the world. Burr himself was not unaware of the effect.

"I couldn't let go," he continued. "I was concerned. Then there was something else. I've always told myself I'd like to go out on a good year. This year was a bad year. Sometimes the plots got so involved even I couldn't understand them. But next year can be a great one."

I could visualize Burr waiting for that "great year" to go out on until Perry Mason was defending cases from a wheel chair—which at his current rate may not be too far away. "No," Burr said. "You get a kind of a second wind, a different approach, new blood in the writing department. I just have a feeling this can be it."

And yet it was evident—despite the formation of Harbour Productions, Unlimited, Burr's new production company which, he says, will field two pilots and possibly a movie next year—that it will be a long time before The Power or anything else replaces Perry Mason. Burr is curiously reluctant to acknowledge that it is still Perry who opens the doors to Burr's larger world.

"No!" he roars, his great beetle brows wrinkling. "Perry presents the image! He is window dressing."

Powerful window dressing. Window dressing enough to make the actor who plays him a big man before the bar associations of the world. Enough to make him a personage in Vietnam, or for that matter anywhere he wants to go. Next year, he says, he will visit 12 countries throughout the world making speeches to universities. Can Gilligan or Jed Clampett do that?

"I speak for world peace through law," he suddenly said. "I'm a kind of one-man lobby for the legal profession. I believe that the world will either destroy itself or learn how to settle things by law. So it becomes the world's most important profession."

"Perry may be a white knight on a horse, but he is accepted. He gives millions of people an awareness of what the law is and the tremendous need for it. It's not very often that a person is given the opportunity to use his personal image to do continued so much good in the world." He paused for a moment. "That's tough to give up regardless," he said.

I said it was my impression he was getting his images mixed.

"No!" he said angrily. "You have to remember I am still me. I sign my checks Ray Burr. I still have six people who do nothing but answer my fan mail, 84 percent of it addressed to me. I am not a 'star'—no one has less temperament. But I am aware. I listen. I get things done."

That he does. For example, it has been the custom of the East Coast art galleries to send exhibitions of American works to our embassies in Europe. Burr wanted West Coast galleries to follow suit in the Far East. When they turned a deaf ear, he sweet-talked a gallery in Tucson, Ariz., into setting up such a program. The only catch was there is no money for crating and sending. So Burr simply pays for it himself.

He pushed forward a packet of photographs from the pile of papers on his desk: Ray Burr arriving in Vietnam, Ray Burr landing by helicopter in some remote outpost. Ray Burr, in fatigues, talking to GI's.

"This is who I am," he said. "Back in 1951, when I went on my first Korean tour, a general told me, 'We can command men to fight and even to die. But we cannot command laughter and tears. In two seconds you people can supply both needs.' I know what he meant. I have been operated on six times for World War II injuries. I learned that when there is something wrong you don't just stand there!"

Burr does his troop-junketing the hard—Burr—way. While Bob Hope primarily plays major bases with a big, brassy show, Burr takes only himself. He spends weeks hedgehopping by Army helicopter through the brush, going from one tiny Vietnamese outpost to another, often to "play" to a mere handful of men. Last time, he estimates, he shook hands with "13,000 out of 15,000 stationed there."

Sometimes these outposts are surrounded by the Viet Cong and he has dodged bullets on more than one occasion. His painful shoulder injury, incurred on the third trip, and which ultimately hospitalized him, was the result of an emergency helicopter maneuver to avoid Viet Cong gunfire.

Burr has long since given up "entertaining" troops. "I talk," he said. "And I listen. That's the real need."

Burr talked of religion. "I am not a churchgoer," he said, "but I like to say grace in my house. I believe in God—in the efficacy of all religions under a Supreme Being.

'I will get out'

"See these hands? They belong to one of the best gardeners in California. They haven't gardened in months. I used to think I could build a wall around my Malibu house and give myself time for these things. Then I found I couldn't. Perry wouldn't let me. One day I will get out. If I'm ever going to be the kind of person you would like to be with, I'll have to."

He shuffled the pile of papers again and came up with a mariner's chart of the Fiji Islands. He pointed to a tiny dot. "See that island? I am in the process of trying to buy it. It is two hours by boat from the nearest port of call, and I will have to blast a passage through the coral reef.

"Meantime, I do what I have to do. What is right for me. What I have done may not have brought absolute happiness. But for me it has brought some measure of satisfaction."

It was after 10. Burr's airplane left for Vietnam early in the morning. His eyelids drooped. Just before this lonely man and I shook hands, he said, "If that makes me into a fool, my friend, then that is what I am."

Fotron is so easy to use it makes "automatic" cameras seem complicated. You never even touch the film. Just push the proper button and Fotron takes over—focuses the lens, sets the exposure, fires the flash, snaps the picture, moves the film to the next exposure and tells you how many shots you have left.

Fotron stops the action sharp and clear. The lifetime Sunburst electronic flash goes off every time you shoot, giving you "sunlight" day or night. No power-failure problems, either. Fotron comes with power pack and recharger built in. To restore energy, just plug your Fotron into any wall outlet!

With all this, Fotron saves you money. You never have to buy gadgets, attachments, batteries or bulbs. In fact, the money you save over the years in flashbulbs alone could pay for your camera!

Two-Car Family Now

NEW ONE'S EASY TO PARK—

JUST LOWER IT INTO THE GROUND

The Munsters have become a two-car family, just like ordinary folks. Since Herman (Fred Gwynne, background) used the Munster Koach mostly for family outings, Grandpa (Al Lewis) decided he should have a car of his own. A 160-mile-an-hour coffin on wheels which he calls "The Dragula," it's equipped with "four-on-the-floor" gear shift, 350-horsepower engine, gold-leaf paint job, solid-silver spiders for hub caps, purple silk-velvet upholstery, and chrome organ pipes for a tuned exhaust.

The builder ran into a small snag—the coffin people wouldn't sell him a coffin. They're to bury people in, they explained, not for driving around. He finally managed to buy a damaged one.

If you bought a car like this it would set you back $10,800. But the parking is easy. You just lower it into the ground.

THE KID IS DEAD... NOT COOGAN

A moving account of the career of that bald fellow who plays Uncle Fester

BY ARNOLD HANO

A publisher recently nixed the idea of contracting for Jackie Coogan's autobiography.

"I don't care how the book turns out," he said. "Everybody thinks Coogan is dead."

Jackie Coogan is very much alive. Just the image of The Kid is dead. Today Jackie Coogan is 50 and bald, and so fat the zipper of his trousers is always down an inch or two. Dead are the days Jackie Coogan lived in a mansion and had not one Rolls-Royce but three. Today Coogan has a Ford convertible. He drives a motorcycle to work. He used to own 10,000 acres of lush California grazing land. Today he's scraped together just enough money to buy a tiny fishing camp in Mexico. He, his fourth wife, Dodie, and their 11-year-old daughter, Leslie, live in a modest three-bedroom house in North Hollywood. The boy who earned $4 million in films, plus $4 million outside films, is today the man who earns $35,000 a year as black-robed Uncle Fester in ABC's The Addams Family.

When he was 10 Coogan went to Europe, and the world took note.

Little Jackie visited the Pope, delegates at the League of Nations stood and cheered, the Greek government gave him its highest decoration. In Paris a mob of 50,000 surrounded the Coogan limousine, making it impossible to move. So the people picked up the car and carried it on their shoulders. That was success. Today? "Coogan is really proud he doesn't drink on the job," an ABC representative said. "He lives hard but he never touches the stuff while he works." This is today's success.

Coogan was the first great child actor. The fortune he earned was squandered, and at 23 he sued his mother and stepfather, Arthur L. Bernstein, for his share. The law said he had no claim, so at least he had the pleasure of knocking his stepfather down with his fist. And he caused the writing of California's Jackie Coogan Act, placing at least half the earnings of any child actor in trust until his majority.

Even before the suit in 1938, there had been jolts. He and his father, Jack Coogan, fellow-actor Junior Durkin, and two others were returning from a dove hunt in Mexico on March 5, 1935, Jackie not quite 21. Outside San Diego, Cal., another car forced them over a cliff. Everyone was killed except Jackie. With seven broken ribs and three broken bones in his back, he carried his father's body up the cliff, returned to carry Junior's body up, and telephoned his mother, before he passed out.

Jackie's hair began to fall out when he was 22. Three marriages came and went. There were two drunk arrests and one marijuana arrest. "If I had ever let anything get me down," he says today, "I'd have shot myself long ago." It has been a life almost impossible to relate. We'll try.

Jackie Coogan was born of vaudeville parents Oct. 26, 1914. At 18 months he appeared in a six-reel film, "Skinner's Baby." When he was

4, Charlie Chaplin saw him on the Los Angeles Orpheum stage, and signed the boy to a role in "The Kid." (Coogan was so young he fell asleep at the première of "The Kid" and never saw the movie until one day he passed the Chaplin studio in 1935. On sudden whim he dropped in. Chaplin dismissed his company, and the two sat in a projection room where Chaplin ran "The Kid." Chaplin pointed out Coogan's father in bit parts in the film. It remains a rare, sweet moment in Coogan's life.)

He was famous at 5. One day he and his mother, Lillian Coogan, went shopping in Los Angeles. A mob converged. The police were called. "A mob of that kind," Coogan says today, "exudes an odor far different from the smell of a crowd at a football game. There is panic and terror."

But there is something else. "You find that people idolize you," Coogan says, today. "They want to touch you, be close to you. It is something you find you need. You carry it all your life. You feel unwanted when you don't get it."

When you ask whether such values contaminate a man, Coogan shrugs his beefy shoulders. "How should I know?" he says. "I never knew anything else." Yet he refuses to think of himself as a man abused by fate. When he speaks of his drunk arrests, he says: "I did wrong. I got caught. That was all."

Yet you search elsewhere for a villain. A candidate is the aforementioned Arthur L. Bernstein, who was the family's business manager. It was Bernstein who pioneered the commercial tie-in market. Coogan's name went on dolls, pencil boxes, games. Peck and Peck paid $100,000 a year for a Jackie Coogan line of clothes. Millions of Coogan caps were sold.

stable. Bernstein ran the show. If he squandered money, he also made it.

The real villain, Coogan insists, was the law for not protecting a child's earnings. Coogan never blamed his mother. Today, widowed Lillian Coogan Bernstein is on crutches or sits in a wheel chair, invalidated for the last eight years in an apartment near Coogan's home. Jackie visits her two or three times a week.

He had private tutors

Jackie had private tutors until he was 10. He attended a military academy, parochial schools, Santa Clara University for two years, and the University of Southern California for his junior year. Always there was an odd parsimony. At college he received a skimpy $6.25 a week.

The day before Coogan's 21st birthday—seven months after his father's death—his mother offered him $1000. "Where's the rest?" he inquired mildly. "You haven't a cent," she reportedly said. "It's all mine."

In November of 1937, Jackie married blonde starlet Betty Grable. She paid for the wedding reception. She was earning $1000 a week. So was he, but he worked just two weeks that year.

On April 11, 1938 he filed suit against his mother and stepfather. Bernstein said: "The law is on our side. Every dollar a kid earns before he is 21 belongs to his parents." But public sympathy for Jackie mounted.

Out of court, Coogan finally received $80,000. Meanwhile he and Grable were drifting. "My success did not match hers," Coogan says carelessly. She divorced him in 1939.

This was the low point of his life, he says. He enlisted in the Army long before Pearl Harbor, and later joined the glider corps. He married Flower Parry, a blonde extra, on Aug. 10, 1941. A son, John Anthony, was born.

A few months later Flower Parry filed for divorce.

Coogan went overseas with Phil Cochran's First Air Commandos. Their mission was to fly General Wingate's Raiders into Burma, 200 miles behind Japanese lines. The night before the landing, Phil Cochran told his glider pilots: "Nothing you've ever done before in life really counts. Tonight you'll find out if you have a soul."

The words burned in Coogan's brain. They still have the power to stir him. On March 5, 1944—grisly anniversary of his father's death—Coogan set down the first glider in the invasion, and won the Air Medal.

But it won no jobs in Hollywood when the war ended. "All I got was big hellos and backslaps." Then in 1946, a friend of Coogan's became ill before he took an act into Slapsy Maxie's Hollywood night club. Coogan filled in, at $1000 a week, for a two-week run. Bald and beefy, he parodied The Kid, playing on his knees. The mélange of the ludicrous and nostalgic touched the audiences. Coogan was held over for 14 weeks, at $2800 per.

He met and married singer Ann McCormack. A daughter, Joan, was born in 1948. Two years later, Ann McCormack divorced Coogan and was awarded the family home and $85 a month for Joan. In April of 1952 he and former Earl Carroll girl Dodie Lanphere flew to Mexico City and were married. Coogan kept this one quiet for 15 months. "Who needs the publicity of a fourth marriage?" he says. This one took.

Coogan landed desultory jobs in summer stock, an occasional TV bit. Then he got the role—he says today—that changed his life. On Oct. 4, 1956, three weeks before his 42nd birthday, he appeared in the very first Playhouse 90, a stark Rod Serling drama with one comedy part. Coogan's. He recalls he received an Emmy nomination, and found himself in demand.

Yet there still were problems. On

Jan. 7, 1961 police entered his Malibu home and found Coogan and two men and a woman. They also found three partially smoked marijuana cigarettes, and enough marijuana for 200 cigarettes. Coogan denied knowing how the marijuana got in the house; he denied smoking any. The judge threw the case out of court. A month later Coogan was discovered by the California Highway Patrol drunk and asleep in his car after dawn, and was fined $20. But these were "occurrences," says Coogan, isolated mistakes, not meaningful to his life. He appeared on more TV shows: Climax!, Kraft Theatre, 14 Red Skeltons, and co-starred in the one-season series, McKeever and the Colonel.

Producer David Levy saw Coogan in McKeever and wanted him for a comedy show based on Charles Addams' New Yorker cartoons. Because ABC was not sure Coogan was right, Levy was asked to test other actors. Twenty-four actors later, Coogan tried on the black robes of Uncle Fester. ABC's Harve Bennett took one look and said: "He's perfect!"

Feels at home with show

Coogan feels at home with the show, but watching the Addams children, Lisa Loring and Ken Weatherwax, can unnerve him. "Kids can't get proper experience today," explains Coogan. "No vaudeville, no road shows, no cheap two-reelers." Once Coogan advised them how to play a scene, at which veteran director Sidney Lanfield thundered: "I'm directing this show, Coog," and Coogan bellowed back: "So that's what you're doing here!" He, Lanfield, and assistant director Jack Voglin form a small clique on the set, the old pros.

Coogan is writing his autobiography and he insists it will be full of laughs. "I've never enjoyed life more than today," he says.

The Kid is dead. Not Coogan.

For intimate marriage problems tiny Norforms assures easier protection than internal bathing

Guards against germs and odors—effective for hours

Tiny Norforms® is the modern feminine suppository that makes douching old-fashioned and unnecessary. Internal bathing cannot give you the convenience—plus the germicidal and deodorant protection—of Norforms.

HOW DAN'L BOONE CONQUERED THE NAVAJOS

Sure it's a press-agent stunt, and we fell for it. And we're glad. And all you have to do is look at the pictures to see why. Never, since the invention of Santa Claus, have kids been made happier by any one man. These pictures could well have been titled, left, "Dan'l the Pied Piper"; and from left across the bottom of the page—"Is it really him?"; "Yes, he's for real"; "I just don't believe it."

It all began when the teacher of these young Navajo children on the reservation near Crown Point, N.M.—Mrs. Sandra Timm—wrote to 20th Century-Fox, producers of the Daniel Boone show. Would they be so kind as to send her some pictures of Fess Parker and other members of the cast? Of all the shows her charges watched, Daniel Boone was the favorite. She would use the pictures as an incentive for her pupils to learn English.

Twentieth Century-Fox did better than that; it sent Daniel Boone himself, to the amazement and joy of Mrs. Timm and her 7- to 12-year-old charges. Was the visit a success?

Said Fess Parker, "... For me it was a profound and flattering experience."

Wrote Mrs. Timm: "How can we ever thank you enough. . . . We will always remember you. . . ."
